

Back Forty Mine Political Engagement for Wisconsin Residents

Federal Elected Officials (US Senators & US Representatives)

US Senators Ron Johnson and Tammy Baldwin are statewide officials and represent all citizens in the State of Wisconsin. Face to face meetings are the best and most effective, however in absence of a face to face meeting, members of Congress pay close attention to the number of phone calls received and what issue(s) the calls are for. Ask your US Senators and Representatives to protect Wisconsin's interest against the threats of the proposed Back Forty Mine.

Local Elected Officials (County, City and Townships)

Local Elected Officials – Local elected leaders often have the most direct engagement with their constituents and also have access to influence State and Federal elected leaders. Marinette County, and its citizens face the greatest threat of the counties in Wisconsin, however Oconto, Brown, Kewaunee and Door counties could also be impacted by the proposed mine. If you live in one of these counties, contact your elected county, city and township leaders and urge them to pass resolutions opposing the proposed Back Forty Mine, if they have not already done so.
